

WALKER GILBERT

Strongly active person | Hates the Laffites | Loves snooping

Customs Inspector

He was a temporary customs inspector in Donaldsonville, where he lived. He had strong aversions against the Laffites and confiscated much of their loot on the Mississippi. He believed their illegal activities were the cause for the shortages of free money in New Orleans and much of the social problems as well.

Fictional Additions

He wasn't actually an amateur detective, and besides his strong intent in stopping the Laffites, nothing suggests he was any better or worse than his contemporaries.

Unique Character Traits

Gilbert has marked horse-like features, intense eyes full of dark secrets, and always a mission that possesses him. Drawn to the dark side of human nature because he wants to eliminate it, he also can't deal with said darkness. He tries dealing with it by keeping journals because he has no one to confide in. The darkness within him forces him to do immoral things.

He appears in ... Spoiler alert

The Adventuress, where he crosses Jean's smuggling plans on the Mississippi and confiscates loot, and in The Ocean's Calling, where he wrecks havoc on Cosma Drilo's life.
